born to be hanged never down or got automokilled—that's good word—automokilled—eh, what?"

They whipped round a somber jut in the road, and his searchlight painted instantly in white outlines against the black world a wagonload of sleepy children returning from some village church affair. They were singing trowsily, "Merrilee we ro-la-long-ro-la-long."

Daphne and Leila seemed to die at once.

Wetherell groaned, "Oh, my God,
the lil' children!"

There was nothing for Wetherell to do but what he did. He spun his wheel and drove his thunderbolt into an open concrete culvert. There was a furious racker. The car turned a somersault and crumpled in a shuddering mass.

Wetherell, pinioned under the wheel, was knocked this way and that and his beautiful head cracked on the concrete like a china doll's.

Leila was snatched from the car as if invisible hands had caught her exquisite body for a lash to flog a telephone pole with, then threw her into a ditch. Daphne was flung and battered and thrust under the car when it turned over. And then the gasoline spilled from the shattered tank and caught fire.

CHAPTER XXV.

Underneath the machine lay the relics of Wetherell, who would suffer no more here. Close by was Daphne Kip, whom a brief unconsciousness gave a short furlough from torture.
She was not alive enough to be afraid of the long, lean flames about the gasoline tank, though they kept springing at her like wolfhounds held in a weakening leash. They had not yet quite reached her, but they missed her less and less.

A small distance off, Leila lay still,
in almost her first ungraceful attitude, oblivious for a few moments of the outrages the blind forces of momentum had wreaked on her with the fury of a Bill Sikes trying to beat a woman to death.

The chauffeurs and passengers of cars that drew up in lengthening queues ran to the scene of Wetherell's disaster.

At first they could not see Wetherell, but they saw Daphne and her peril, and they set frantically to work to drag her free. But she was so caught that they could not release her until they should remove the car. They pulled and heaved, but it was jammed into the culvert and the ditch so tight that they could not budge it, though they took risk enough and suffered blistered hands and charred clothes.

At last one chauffeur fastened a chain to the rear axle of Wetherell's car and to the front axle of his, and,
by alternate backing and swerving, dragged and hoisted Wetherell's car upward and rearward while other men snatched Daphne from beneath and away from the flames just as they were nibbling at her skirts.

At the same time they disclosed the body of Wetherell and with huge difficulty fetched it forth. Still others found Leila in a heap, a toy with broken joints.

The last thing Daphne had known was the sensation of being shaken to death, a helpless mouse in a terrier's mouth. The next she knew was that she was seated on the edge of a ditch and leaning against the shoulder of a kneeling woman in evening dress.

A number of shadowy men and women waited against the searing glare of the gasoline.

They arrived at last at a hospital.
Daphne was lifted out and delivered into the possession of two curt young nurses. She was stretched on a litter, carried feet foremost into an elevator, down a corridor to a room, and coiled out on a bed. Two nurses proceeded to undress her and bathe her.
Then an older doctor came in and examined her injuries. She blazed with some one complete blush, but to her she was hardly more than a car crushed in a garage. He nodded cheerfully and said:

"You're broken young lady, but no internal damage at all. I shall see you in five hours, but's all right, my dear."

"What time?" Daphne
asked.

"Oh, I shall come at eight o'clock."
He bowed and left.

"What is Bayard?" Daphne
asked.

"My brother—her husband?"

"A young man who was?"

"Yes, yes, that was not your husband, then?"

Daphne shook her head. "He is no relation—a friend."

"Perhaps we'd better notify Bayard.
What's his last name? Has he a telephone?"

Daphne said no name and number. Then her head was lifted, a capsule placed in her mouth, and a glass of water held to her lips. When she was restored to her pillow a sedative was within her to subdue the riot of her thoughts.

She wondered what Duane would think of her now. She remembered the money she had asked him to lend her. It would be in the morning's mail. But she would not be there to open it. Mrs. Chivvis might not dare to.

All her acquaintance began to march past Daphne's brain in review.
Thoughts and half-thoughts and whimsies danced through her mind in a carnival of stupor and frenzy, while to the eyes of the nurses she lay still and asleep.

In another room Leila was shrieking and fighting, whimpering and moaning, a torn gazelle under the claws and fangs of tigerish pain. Abruptly there came a lethal silence also from her. They had succeeded in drugging her at last.

When Daphne had left Bayard in the afternoon she had found that he was depressed, but not how deeply.
She supposed that his money loss was only a failure of expected profits, or the mishap of an investment. She did not dream that he was crippled financially.

Bayard was so forlorn, so profoundly ashamed of his bad guesswork, that he could not bear to show his face at any of his clubs that night.
He had boasted there too often of having bought heavily of the stock. He had persuaded too many of his friends to invest in it.

So he went where busy men go when other places are closed to them.
He went home. When he reached his apartment he found that Leila had given the servants a night out.

Leila had left no word of her own plans. After a forlorn delay Bayard called for Daphne. She was gone, too, with no word of her return.

At last the telephone rang. A man's voice spoke and explained that it spoke from the hospital.

"Is Mr. Kip there? Is this Mr. Kip?
Mr. Bayard Kip? Your wife is here, and your sister, and your friend Wetherell—automobile accident—out here on Long Island—pretty bad smash.
Your wife's not very well—better come out—as soon as you can."

The world reeled. Bayard seized his hat, played a tattoo on the elevator bell, darted into the street, yelled at a taxicab with ferocity, got in, ordered the driver to "go like hell." He kept putting his head out to howl at him.

At the hospital he questioned the in-terne fiercely about Leila and Daphne, and had evasive answers. He did not ask about Wetherell, but the interne volunteered the news that he was dead.

That made the ultimate difference.
Bayard stopped short in awe, his forehead cold as if a clammy hand had been laid on it. Death was at work.
Where would he stop?

In the chill white aisle of the corridor his frenzy gave place to a sense of bitter cold. A chill white nurse led him past doors and doors to a room where in a white bed lay a chill white thing, a cylinder of cotton.

Leila's face was almost invisible in bandages; her whole body encrusted and swaddled. She was an Egyptian princess mummified for a moment her soul came out of the dirt, at his gasp of pity. It ran about inside its cocoon trying to find a nerve to pull on a muscle to signal to him outside. The mere lifting of her hand brought from her a moan of such woe as canceled all Bayard's grievances against her.

Once Bayard's resentments and jealousies were swept from his mind, his old love came back throbbing and leaping. His very soul bled and he dropped to his knees, his arm thrown across that bundle of wreckage which had been his choice among the world's beauties.

He was seen dragged from his communion with his once-more unconscious bride by the young doctor, who lifted him up with the unpracticed diplomacy of internes and led him aside, mumbling: "Say, what you tryin' to do? Kid her? She's weak and her heart's flutterin'. Cheer her up if you can. If you can't, you can't stay. Better get out, my way."

Bayard apologized graciously and promised better behavior, and was permitted to stand back to Leila. He looked her one undivided hand; it was as beautiful as the severed hand of a Greek statue, and as marble white and cold.

The interne led him at length out into the corridor. And now Bayard remembered that he had also a sister, an only sister, in this same tavern of pain. His heart went out to her. He remembered, too, that they had a father and a mother to tell or deceive.

Lore of the Wedding Ring

In the Isle of Man the wedding ring was formerly used as an instrument of torture. Cyril Davenport in his book on "Jewelry" remarks that there once existed a custom in that island, according to which an unmarried girl who had been offended by a man could bring him to trial, and if he were found guilty, she would be given a sword, a rope,
and a ring.

With the sword she might cut off his head, with the rope she might hang him, or with the ring she might marry him. It is said that the last named punishment was invariably inflicted.

The wedding ring was anathema to the early Puritans who regarded personal adornment as one of the many snares of Satan.

In the old English marriage service it was the custom for the bridegroom to put the ring on the thumb of the bride saying, "In the name of the Father," then on the next finger saying, "And the Son," and then on the third finger saying "and the oly Ghost" finally on the fourth finger with the word "Amen."

The ring was left there because
"A vein proceeds thence to the heart."
In the modern marriage the ring is placed at once upon the third finger, the invocation to the Trinity being understood.

Artificial Ice to Take Place of Natural

Thirty years ago such a mild winter as has just been experienced by this section of the country would have spelled disaster to many lines of endeavor. It would have meant ruin to the ice business because there never was a day when there was enough ice on any river, creek, lake, or pond to make cutting it worth while. It would have seriously hampered the storage of food both in cities and on farms, and many a spring house and preservation cave would have been without ice all the succeeding summer. Nowadays, however, manufactured ice has taken the place of the natural product, and the mild winter will have practically no effect on next summer's supply. Even in face of the growing use of artificial ice, however, natural ice is still stored in many places around the city and is largely used by farmers. All this has been lost this year and farmers are forced to buy their summer ice from the manufacturing plants.

he made it a habit to be home less

The reason why a married man likes to spend his coin with the boys would be awful if he happened to spend any of it on his wife.

A Gas Range That Isn't a Gas Range

Many times it takes two lessons to make a single lasting impression. Through thrift and wise management, these young people saved sufficient money with which to purchase a gas range. They didn't give the home gas man an opportunity to provide for their wants but instead were attracted by the "cut price gas range" from the mail order house. The range arrives; it proves a second or a third in quality, parts are broken and others never designed to fit snugly and perfectly and it is a disappointed sorrowful couple that behold their folly. Before, they fell victims to the mail order gas light and even with their previous bitter experience when the light failed, still they chose to nibble again at the bait of the ever reaching catalogue. Their loss is one they can ill afford and from which it will take them many weeks to recover.

STATE OF BAD ROADS PREVENT EXPANSION

Poor Highways a Weak Link Between Producer and Consumer.

AN INCREASE APPROPRIATION.

Past Few Years Saw Big Turn in Transportation From Railroad to Highway.

There are today some 2,500,000 miles of rural roads in the United States. Of this amount perhaps 12 per cent could be classified as improved, while only about one-quarter of 1 per cent can be said to be suitable for the carriage of heavy-duty motor trucks. And in the face of this condition it can be said without chance of contradiction that the future development of the United States rests upon the road, asserts Roy D. Chaplin, former chairman of the Highway Transport Committee, Council of National Defense.

The past few years have witnessed a tremendous turn over in transportation from the railway to the highway. The congestion which prevailed during the war made necessary the commercial utilization of the highway to an extent thought impossible a few years ago. The motor truck, little known before the war, sprang into prominence as a commercially practical form of transportation, and while the fighting has ceased, the need for the motor truck remains with us, more insistent than ever before. Within certain limitations the freight car of the highway is more efficient than the rail carrier, and because it is, it may be taken as a permanent form of transportation and one destined to have a large influence on the movements of trade in the future.

The hour had struck when the fast moving, efficient motor vehicle of commerce must replace the horse and the costly terminal charges which prevail upon the short-haul branches of the rail lines. Already the motor truck has become a "feeder" to the railroad, shortly it is destined to add enormously to profitable long hauls, while entirely or very nearly so eliminating the unprofitable spurs. Railroad men, generally, recognize this new movement and welcome it. Street railway men, not so keenly alert to its possibilities as a feeder to their lines, have yet to take the fullest advantage of the opportunities which it presents.

But back of the motor truck rests the road. While the highway as such is of little interest to those outside of the engineering field, as a means for transportation it becomes of vital importance to every citizen of the United States, whether he be in a profession or trade, a minister, a merchant, a doctor. High and low, rich and poor, the road comes into contact with all of us and upon its relative efficiency depends to a greater extent than most of us dream the ultimate cost of all that we eat, wear or have.

"No one knows, how much the country pays for cartage said William C. Redfield, Secretary of Commerce recently." But anyone who looks into the question is pretty sure to find out that the figure is larger than he thought it could be. The annual charge is probably far above the total of freight charges."

Despite these facts, which will be verified by all who have studied the question despite the fact that official Government figures placed the haulage over the highways at 2,000,000,000 ton-miles in 1917, our roads are today all that they should not be. They are inefficient, inadequate, antiquated. They are, as has been said repeatedly, the weak link between production and consumption. They must be improved, not at some future date, but now, if the nation is to be geared to its greatest efficiency for the commercial war which is upon us.

It is not enough to make statements, to recognize their soundness. Action of a constructive sort must be had.

The means for the expansion of our system of roads rests in a resolution which was passed recently by the Highway Congress in Chicago, and approved at a meeting of the chairman of the State Highways transport committees, and which shortly will be crystallized into action in the form of a measure presented for the consideration of Congress.

Broadly speaking, three subjects are brought up for discussion, viz., a radical increase in the Federal aid appropriation which will make possible road building upon a comprehensive scale, the creation of a highway commission, and provision for a national highways system to be built and forever maintained at the nation's expense.

Of the first point it is not necessary to say much. The need is so generally recognized, its economic advantages are so great, as to be generally appreciated.

The matter of a national highway commission is not, however, so generally understood and it should be carefully studied, since after all, the commission is of really greater importance at the moment than the appropriation, essential as that is.

Improving Not Enough.

In the past the general plan of road building has been to improve existing highways. Today this is not enough. The needs of transportation have become so great and are of such enormous importance to the nation that they require constant research and study. Before the road is built the needs of the community should be carefully and thoroughly analyzed not only in regard to the actual tonnage available for traffic, but from the standpoint of future development and from the relationship of that traffic not only to the prosperity of the immediate community where it originated, but to the State and nation and in a broad sense, to the commerce of the world.

Further than that, the problem is too great in its scope to remain as the mere bureau of a department. Road building will shortly become one of the major activities of our Government. It is necessary if this money is to be wisely and efficiently expended that we proceed upon a carefully worked out, thoroughly business-like plan. So a commission of five men to be selected by the President, with the advice and consent of the Senate, is provided for, as the body in charge of this analysis of transportation and expenditure of the Government funds.

So the national highway system is proposed with the national Government in charge of the operation, just as the Government today assumes all control over navigable streams.

It is no small task which is proposed by the good roads men of the country, but the fact that they represent sentiment in all parts of the nation gives it weight which cannot be sensibly overlooked by any ambitious legislator.

True, there are many today who do not fully appreciate what good roads mean to them from a personal standpoint, yet if they will investigate they will soon be convinced.

Roads we must have, will have. No question is of more pressing importance. Public sentiment is crystallizing on the subject and the moment for definite action is at hand. Every good citizen should lend his weight to the movement.

The Gazette is the leading newspaper of Bedford County and its circulation is far ahead of any of its contemporaries. As an advertising medium it is one of the best in this part of the state.

Friday Morning April 4, 1919

Entered at the Post Office at Bedford Pa., as second class matter.

Plenty of Republicans who rode into Congress last fall on the slogan, "We will stand behind the President" has stood behind him just about fifteen years and will forever stand behind him.

Senator Knox can find out how the sentiment is in Pennsylvania for the League of Nations by running over to Butler, or Greensburg. He can go by steam, electricity or gas and it will take him but a few minutes.

Soldiers are permitted to retain their masks and helmets as souvenirs of their participation in the war. If any have turned these trophies in they will be reissued to them on application at the nearest zone supply.

The Republicans who filibustered and defeated the $3,000,000,000 appropriation did a great thing. They frustrated the hopes of thousands of soldiers and sailors. This is the first great defeat the dough boys have had.

It is said that James—Brice—Jordan got the position of Road Superintendent for Lester Karns because Karns could deliver Monroe Township for them when ever he wanted to. Some say Karns has no other qualification. When the primary rolls around next September you will see Karns right at the polls for James for District Attorney, instead of working on the road.

A great deal is said concerning a memorial to our soldier boys. Several meetings have been held but nothing has been accomplished. Many suggest a new Court House. This idea is promulgated by those who have been advocating a court house for years. Others advocate a bridge over to the station. This has prehistoric advocates. Others want the Old Washington Headquarters taken over and remodeled as a rest and reading room. There are people who have been trying for years to have the old headquarters preserved. Our suggestion is this: Wait till all the boys come home. Then have them meet, formulate an organization of their own, decide on their own memorial and then let the people foot the bill by popular subscription and by county appropriation. Consult the wishes of the boys "over there". It looks to us as if too much political capital and selfish interests are being made of a project which ought to be purely patriotic. Wait till the boys come home. Let them have some say in the matter.

LEAGUE COVENANT HAS TEETH

In a copyrighted editorial in the Philadelphia Public Ledger, former President Taft shows that the covenant of the league of nations is strong and enforceable, and in no wise contravenes the policies or interests of the United States.

Regarding the misconception to which critics of the covenant have given currency, Mr. Taft said:

"The attitude of those who favor the covenant has been misconstrued, increasing the confusion in the mind of the public in respect to the inestimable value of the covenant as it is. Were the alternatives presented exactly as it is, or of postponing the coming of peace and continuing the state of war until the conference could reconvene and make other provisions for peace, I should without the slightest fear as to the complete safety of my country under its provisions vote for it as the greatest step in the betterment of the world and for the benefit of my country in recorded history."

Answering the contention that the covenant is without provision for enforcement, Mr. Taft continued:

"The proposed league has real teeth and a bite to it. It furnishes real machinery to organize the power of the peaceful nations of the world into economic and military action, which by its very existence and certainty will keep nations from war and will force them to the acceptance of a peaceful settlement. This will dispense with necessity for the exercise of economic pressure or force."

WHO PAYS THE BILLS INCURRED?

Some one has had the audacity to ask the destructionists, Lodge, Reed, Poindexter and others who are going to pay the bills for them to stump the country against the League of Nations. Yes, that's it. Who is going to pay the bills, carfare, hotel, publicity etc. of these men when this propaganda proceeds? Do the munition factories? The Steel Magnates? Why don't they want a permanent peace? Will it hurt their pocket books? Why not stop war for all time if possible? Come on, now! Who is going to pay the bills? That's what the people want to know.

We might add also how does Smith, our present member of the Legislature make ends meet? He gets a salary of $1500 a year. He spends from $300 to $500 in a campaign. He stops at the Penn—Harris

Hotel at $14 per week. When he goes to Philadelphia he stops at the Bellevue—Stratford, a $5.00 a day house. The carfare to Philadelphia from Harrisburg is something like $10 down and back. He comes home every week or so which costs him $10 or more and some weeks he has appeared in Bedford county twice, which means twice $10 or else he is neglecting his duties at Harrisburg by being absent at roll call. He stops at hotels of $3.00 to $4.00 a day in Bedford County and he maintains all this on a salary of $1500. Can any other person in Bedford county do it? But don't say anything. He is going to run for Congress in 1920. Won't Bailey, Rose, Reynolds, Thropp, Hartman and Hicks be flattered?

More Careless Than Ever

In view of the long-continued efforts made to impress upon the American people the undoubted fact that their own carelessness is principally responsible for United States disgracefully high fire record, it is not encouraging to learn from the insurance trade journals that the losses sustained from this cause were greater in 1918 than in any previous year since the San Francisco conflagration of 1906. In money value they totaled $290,959,885, which compares with $262,985,665 in 1917, 0, 200 in 1915. Thus we seem 11111 032,200 in 1915. Thus we seem to be progressing backwards at a rather rapid gate. The per capita loss for the estimated population of the country is placed at $2.76 of which amount at least $2 was absolutely unnecessary. For the individual the burden seems light, but in the aggregate it is seen to be staggering.

It is also somewhat disconcerting to learn that among the 48 States Pennsylvania achieved the unenviable notoriety of having more towns and cities, 44, in which fires that destroyed three or more buildings occurred, than any other Commonwealth. New York reports 34 such communities; Texas, 27; Wisconsin, 29; Massachusetts, 26; California, 22, etc. Possibly one explanation of this is that Pennsylvania has more towns and cities than any other State and so is entitled to more fires.

Clearly the American people still have to learn much about the desirability of preventing fires. Possibly it is the very abundance of insurance provisions against losses that makes us so careless in this regard.

A New Kind of a Strike

Imagine a woman telephoning a doctor. "My baby is sick; I don't know what's the matter; come right away." And the doctor answers, "I am sorry, madam, but the bourgeois council is on strike today and the rules of our union are that I cannot come. You must tend to your baby yourself."

Or imagine a man calling up a lawyer and saying, "They are going to foreclose a mortgage on my house today unless some lawyer helps me." And the lawyer answers, "I'm sorry but the bourgeois council is on strike today and the rules of the union are that I cannot come. You must tend to your mortgage yourself."

This is what is happening in German cities where bourgeois councils of doctors, lawyers, preachers, engineers and bookkeepers have organized unions to combat the working-men-soldier councils that have declared so many strikes recently. Of a certainty that is what happens to the professional class actually carry out the declared purpose to counterstrike the strikes of labor.

A fellow tried to knock a Man to us because the Man failed because he was too ambitious and took in too much territory. And the fellow who was knocking the man was a bird who had failed because he didn't have nerve enough to try.

Even if it looks something like a circus horse wears in the parade, don't knock the hat your wife brings for herself. The old girl is saving you 15 or 20 bucks, and even if the hat is a scream, remember that Jack is Jack.

HOW CAN YOU TELL YOUR FAVORITE TOBACCO?

As Plain as the Nose on Your Face—Just Smell It

Smokers do not have to put tobacco in their pipes to find out if they like it. They can just rub the tobacco between the palms of their hands and sniff it. The nose is an infallible guide to smoking enjoyment.

All smoking tobaccos employ some flavoring "to improve the flavor," burning qualities of the leaves," to quote the Encyclopedia Britannica. Naturally, there is considerable difference in the quality of the flavoring used, and the nose quickly detects the difference. TUXEDO tobacco, the purest, most wholesome and delicious of all flavorings. And the almost universal liking for TUXEDO in a great measure explains the widespread popularity of TUXEDO Tobacco.

Carefully aged, old TUXEDO tobacco, plus a dash of pure chocolate gives TUXEDO Tobacco a pleasant fragrance your nose can quickly distinguish from any other tobacco. Try it and see.

The Many Mysteries of Nature

BY L. W. BOWER, M. D.

You can take an onion seed and a pansy seed, and plant them side by side in the same spot of ground. In one case, you get an onion, with its peculiarly strong odor, and in the other you get a flower of rare beauty. You can plant a poppy seed and get opium (a dangerous, habit-forming drug), or you can plant a rhubarb seed and get something that helps constipation. No scientist, living or dead, can explain these mysteries of Nature. Behind the invisible life germ in each seed is hidden the deep secret that nobody understands. Everything growing out of the ground seems intended for some use in establishing natural conditions. Dr. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., long since found out what is naturally best for women's diseases. He learned it all through treating thousands of cases. The result of his studies was a medicine called Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. This medicine is made of vegetable growths that nature surely intended for backache, headache, weakness, dizziness, bearing-down pains, periodical irregularities, pelvic inflammations, and for the many disorders common to women in all ages of life. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is made of lady's slipper root, black cohosh root, unicorn root, blue cohosh root and Oregon grape root. Women who take this standard remedy know that in Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription they are getting a safe woman's tonic so good that druggists everywhere sell it.

Favorite Prescription should have the full confidence of every woman in America because it contains no alcohol and no narcotic. Dr. Pierce knew, when he first made this standard medicine, that whiskey and morphine are injurious, and so he has always kept them out of his remedies. Send 10c to Dr. Pierce's Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y. for trial pkg. Tablets.

LESSON FOR APRIL 6

GOD THE FATHER ALMIGHTY.

LESSON TEXTS—Genesis 1:1, 27; Psalms 103:1-14; Matthew 6:24-34.
GOLDEN TEXT—Our Father who art in heaven, hallowed be thy name.—Matthew 6:9.

ADDITIONAL MATERIAL—Deuteronomy 6:4, 5; Psalms 145:1-21; Isaiah 61:3; Matthew 22:36-38; John 4:24; 1 John 4:7-10.
PRIMARY TOPIC—The Heavenly Father's care for his children.
JUNIOR TOPIC—God our Creator and Father.

INTERMEDIATE TOPIC—What we owe to our Father in Heaven.

I. God the Creator (Gen. 1:1, 27).

God was before all things. God the uncaused cause is the cause of all things. "Before the mountains were brought forth, or ever thou hadst formed the earth and the world, even from everlasting to everlasting, thou art God." (Psalm 90:2). The universe came into being by the will and act of the personal being called God. In verse one is enunciated the sublime philosophy of every right life. In the beginning of all science and philosophy—God; in the beginning of every life—God; in the beginning of every year—God; in the beginning of every day—God; in the beginning of every business—God; in the beginning of every thought, plan and human relationship—God. Conviction as to this sets one free from the false philosophy of the age. Man himself is a creation of God, not an evolution. Man was created in the likeness and image of God. This precludes the foolish idea that man ascended from and through a brute. He came into being by a special creative act of God, having been preceded by a special council of the Godhead (Gen. 1:26, 27). Those who believe this record repudiate the Darwinian theory of man's origin as not only a human vagary, but a vicious philosophy inspired by the devil. When man came forth from the Creator's hands he was neither a savage nor a baby; he possessed the powers of a mature man. As an example of the maturity of his intellect, he named the animals as they passed before him.

II. God the Preserver (Psalms 103:1-14).

All created things would perish were it not for the preserving mercies of God. It embraces the following gracious beneficial acts: 1. Forgives all iniquities (v. 3). Pardon is the prime necessity. If moral things are to be preserved. 2. Healeth all diseases (v. 3). This refers to the healing of the body and the soul. Renovation of man's moral nature is necessary. 3. Redeemeth the life from destruction (v. 4). Redemption implies the payment of all demands against the debtor. God in Christ performs the part which the individual failed to perform, and crowns him with the full right of citizenship in his kingdom. 4. "Satisfieth thy mouth" (v. 5). This means that God satisfies all legitimate desires and thus the youth is renewed. The original capacities are restored to their native vigor. 5. Executeth righteousness and judgment (vv. 6-14). The wrongs of life are righted and thus man is relieved of the burdens which they entail. He extends his pity toward us.

III. God Our Father (Matt. 6:24-34). Christ came to reveal the Father. The subjects of the kingdom will love him as a child loves its father.

1. Undivided affection (v. 24). The child of the heavenly Father makes the unequivocal choice between God and the world, for unless God has the first place he has no place.

2. Not anxious about food and clothing (vv. 25-32). (1) It is useless (v. 27). Anxiety can bring nothing. "My God will supply all our needs" (Phil. 4:19). (2) It shows distrust of the Father (vv. 28-30). In the measure that one is anxious about these things he shows his lack of faith in the ability and love of God. If we would please God we must come to him in faith (Heb. 11:6). The birds and flowers shame us in this (vv. 26-28). (3) It is heathenish (v. 32). We do not wonder that those who are ignorant of God should manifest anxiety, but for his children to do so is to play the heathen. He knows that we have need of temporal things and if he cares for the flowers and birds he will surely not allow his children to suffer.

3. He diligently seeks the kingdom of God (vv. 33, 34). He subordinates temporal things to things of the spirit. This shows the right relationship that a child of God is to sustain to secular affairs. This does not mean that a child of God does not exercise proper forethought in making a support for himself and family. The warning is not against legitimate forethought, but anxious worry.

Forgetfulness of Self.

A true perception of the Gospel is the entire forgetfulness of self, after absence of any pretension, and the complete and entire refusal to accept the world's praise or judgment.—General ("Chinese") Gordon.

He Who Loves God.

One who loves God truly asks no other compensation than God himself; for if he should demand something else, it would be the prize that he loved, and not God.—Bernard of Clairvaux.

Identification by Finger Prints

The average man does not realize that the mode of identification by finger prints is absolutely unassailable, never having failed when fairly tried. Like ridges have never been found on the fingers of any two persons. Today it is utilized in many odd but useful ways.

Undeterred persons no longer need to sign documents by making a cross; a finger print is far more positive and absolutely proof against forgery. Banks are already confirming signatures, and corporations are beginning to identify employees in this way.

Finger prints were taken as signatures to receipts for payment to the workmen who constructed the Panama Canal.

Inspector Taurot of the New York Police Department, has suggested that birth certificates be accompanied by the baby's and mother's finger prints.

It has even been tentatively suggested that all individuals establish a record of their identity by depositing their finger prints in some legal office, to be duplicated in a central office at Washington.

Since finger prints are reliable and decomposition has obliterated them, their value in establishing lost identity is obvious.

Many suits for fraudulent insurance claims would be prevented if the insured were compelled to add a finger print to the usual signature. This would furnish mute, but unerring evidence.

Senator Knox says the League of Nations is nothing more than a powerful of nations to get behind the scrap of paper. So is the U. S. Constitution, so the state Constitution, so the Ten Commandments, and at one time the Ten Commandments didn't even constitute even a scrap of paper. Yet all commandments didn't even constitute a moral code or correct conduct based on right reason, not saying that we all live up to them all the time but most of us live up to most of them most all of the time. Laws of party can afford to oppose it and no life as they are will be disobeyed party will oppose it.

We Go to Press Thursday Afternoon

The Gazette hereafter will go to press on Thursday afternoon instead of Thursday night as has been the custom. The change is made because in many places of the county our papers do not reach their destination before Saturday and sometimes not before Monday. By going to press on Thursday afternoon all our papers ought to reach their destination on Friday. Our correspondents as well as our advertisers will kindly remember to have their copy ready early in the week that it may be inserted. We got several letters too late recently and several advertisements too late last week to give any publication. It is our aim to insert all our correspondence but copy arriving on Wednesday is too late. Letters should be mailed on Monday or Tuesday morning.

Unusual Service For Our Readers

The Gazette has secured for a limited time the services of a concrete engineer who will advise our readers in problems of concrete work which arise on the farm, or elsewhere.

If a silo is being contemplated, we shall give the inquirer the capacity in tons; the amounts of cement sand, and gravel; the proportions to be used, etc; The inquirer must state the height and inside diameter of silo in feet, that he wishes to know about.

Other concrete problems are constantly arising on the farm, now that concrete is being used so extensively, and we shall be glad to secure advice for our readers on this work.

If pavements are to be built; barnyard areas; floors; water troughs; tanks; engine foundations, or any work subject to vibration; fence posts; basement walls; foundations; in fact, any thing that may come up we shall get the concrete proportions and the amounts per cubic yard of cement sand and gravel. We shall give the modern technical methods of preparing the foundations, as well as how the concrete should be laid.

It is not proposed to go into intricate engineering problems where investigation will be necessary. That is not the purpose of this service, for we shall not take up problems involving a visit to the scene of the proposed work.

We shall have a column in the Gazette where these questions will be answered. The inquirer should give his name and address, and write "information request" on the envelope when writing to this office. We hope that our readers will take advantage of this unusual service for many reasons.

Technical advice on concrete work is needed. The time of "hit or miss" in all lines of work is over. The period of reconstruction is upon us, calling for the greatest economy, combined with the utmost efficiency.

A New Mother for Invention

There is sure on thing about living in the country,—it certainly teaches you to stand on your own feet.

The city is, par excellence, the place of specialists. When anything goes wrong in any department of the household, if you live in the city, you call in a specialist; if you live in the country, you fix it yourself.

Take the little (?) matter of plumbing, for instance. Suppose you are a city dweller and something goes wrong with that apparently intricate system of balls and sockets in the water tank in your bath room. There is a plumber right around the corner or at the farthest, at the other end of your telephone, just waiting to pick up his tools and charge you so much per minute for his walk to your house. It would be flying in the face of Providence to interfere in his department. And so you go to the telephone and that's the end of it (till the end of the month.) The intricate system remains indefinitely amystery to you.

Suppose, however you live in the country. The nearest plumber has his headquarters in B., eleven miles away. Very likely he is eleven miles the other side of B., on an all-day job, and you call for help, when the water persists in acting queerly would only bring that interesting information from his wife. So what do you do? Why the only thing that is left to do, is to get acquainted with the mystery of the ball and socket. You finally manage to work out the problem and fix what's wrong, and ever after you remain on friendly, almost patronizing terms with your plumbing. I have used plumbing as a symbol of the way the city dweller has to stand on his feet because I think it is a good symbol, also because it represents my own experience.

For the first thirty years of my life I lived in the city within four blocks of the plumber and thought plumbing one of the seven deadly mysteries of the world. Then I acquired a summer residence in the country and learned to use my wits.

Of course, the plumber is only one of the many specialists who live right around the corner in the city. Next door to him is the doctor, on the other side, the carpenter, across the street, the furnace man, the locksmith, etc. They are all ready and eager to keep the city dweller from trying to use his intelligence in any but his own specialty. Whereas, in the country, it's either learn to use your wits or suffer for the lack of them.

Truly, to prevent an old proverb, "Distance is the mother of invention."

In spite of all the labor-saving machinery that has been invented it is a good bet that a modern man has to work just about as hard as his father did.

We once knew a woman who sued her husband for divorce on the ground of incompatibility because he wouldn't argue with her.

Discharged Men Applying for Bonus

Officers, soldiers, field clerks, and nurses of the Army who have been discharged and have received their final pay with out the $60 bonus, should write a letter to the Zone Finance Officer, Lemon Building, Washington D. C. stating their service since April 6, 1917, the date of bonus checks to be sent and enclosing with this letter their discharge certificate or military order for discharge and both, if both were issued. Upon the receipt by the Zone Finance Officer, Washington D. C. of this information and the soldier's discharge certificate, this officer will cause checks to be drawn and mailed to the claimants in the order in which their claims were received by him. The discharge certificate will be returned to the soldier with the check. Certified copies of discharge papers will not be accepted. The Zone Finance officer at Washington has more than 150,000 of these checks ready for mailing, and they are going out at a rate of ten or fifteen thousand a day. This rate is constantly being increased, so that it should not take long to fill all applicants. We suggest, when it is necessary for men to send their original discharge papers to Washington, that they have them registered in the County Recorder's Office, indeed, this is a wise precaution with all discharge papers. If the Chapter, Branches or Auxiliaries can be of any assistance to you in this matter, please let us know. Very truly yours, W. H. SOLOMON, Chairman.

War Veterans to Organize

Lieut. Col. Roosevelt, son of our deceased patriot and statesman, has been put in charge of organizing in this country an association of officers and enlisted men who have served in the American forces in the World War. This will include all men who served, either at home or overseas.

Col. Roosevelt gave out a type-written statement telling of a meeting held in Paris March 15, to March 17. His statement follows:

"On February 15 a representative group of members of the National Guard and National Army, then overseas, held a preliminary meeting in Paris to consider plans for the organization of an association to include in its membership all officers and enlisted men who have served in the forces of the United States, either at home or overseas, in the war against the Central Powers, with the purpose of promoting comradeship and serving the nation by keeping alive the spirit which has caused American citizens to make such great sacrifices."

"At this preliminary meeting steps were taken to hold in Paris the meeting now going on, at which a program will be formulated to be sufficiently late in the year to allow meeting of a thoroughly representative body of all officers and men who have served in the American forces during the great war."

"It is intended that this meeting in America shall be called at a date sufficiently late in the year to allow for the return of the Expeditionary Force and for the mustering out of service of substantially all nonprofessional soldiers."

"Representatives of the meeting which is being held in Paris—March 15 to March 17—will promptly come to America to co-operate with those who have not had the privilege of serving overseas and with the discharged members in this country of the Expeditionary Force."

The Hunns are looking forward to another Tag when they will kick the lining out of Uncle Sam and get even with him for throwing a monkey wrench into their machinery. Well, by der time dot Tag comes there will be bridges across the Atlantic and tunnels under it, and we can lick the Hun every Wednesday in the week. Also every Saturday, Thursday, Monday, Sunday and Tuesday in the week.

Arbor Day Good Time to Pay Tribute to Men

"Such an observance of Arbor day as will secure a widespread planting of trees dedicated to those whose lives have been sacrificed in the great struggle to preserve American rights and the civilization of the world" is advocated by the secretary of agriculture, David P. Houston, in a letter just sent to the governors of the States.

The secretary's letter follows:

"The observance of Arbor day began soon after the Civil war. A distinguished citizen of Nebraska, who later became secretary of agriculture was the prime mover in securing its recognition within his state, where it first took root; and the board of agriculture of that state, on his motion, designated the first Arbor day. From the beginning it has had a civic motive and an association of patriotism."

"Another and greater war has come to its inevitable conclusion. The cause of righteousness of liberty of all that Americans hold dear has prevailed. We shall seek many ways to perpetrate the memory of those who made the great sacrifice. The memorials will take many forms. The names of those who have fallen will be perpetuated by costly monuments and inscribed on enduring tablets. Great works that serve the needs of peace also will doubtless be dedicated to them."

"But along with these memorials, we can easily discover ways in which we may simply and spontaneously pay our tribute to them. We can keep fresh our memory of what they gave; and we can perpetuate their names in familiar places. It has been happily suggested that we may do this by adorning with young trees, each named for a fallen soldier, our waysides, our yards, and our pleasure places. And in most of our States Arbor day is at hand. This year we may give to that day a meaning more profound, a purpose more exalted, yet also an association more personal."

"I conceive that, if the origin of the day be borne in mind, the invitation to our fellow citizens to join in making it a day especially set apart and consecrated for tree planting, may appropriately come from this department. I take the liberty, therefore, of suggesting that you commend to the citizens of your state, and particularly to those in attendance upon its schools, such an observance of Arbor day as will secure a widespread planting of trees, dedicated to those whose lives have been sacrificed in the great struggle to preserve American rights and the civilization of the world."

Governor Sprout has set April 11 and 25 as Arbor days.

Power of Public Opinion

A Debbs is sent to prison. Ten men at once begin trying to get him out, the ten are sent to prison and twenty others start a movement to effect the release of the eleven. Jail the twenty and a hundred will arise to protest. Jail the hundred and a thousand will come forward. Jail the thousand and there may be a revolution.

When a man is sent to prison for murder or for robbery, not a great many men will long continue to fight for his release unless for some special reason there is grave doubt as to the guilt of the one imprisoned. But when a man is sent to prison for expressing an opinion all of those who hold same opinion become a minority party. Opinion cannot be controlled by law. It is quite wrong to say or to think that John Doe, who is mean to his employees, should be shot. It is wrong in a legal sense to say or think that men who are mean to their employees should be shot. It is not legally wrong to justify robbery as a purely abstract proposition, but it is a crime to conspire to steal any particular thing. There is a wide latitude between thinking and acting as far as legal guilt is concerned. The man who in an autocracy says that democracy is best would always be arrested if thinking were a crime because he is opposing the established order. There have, however, been few autocrats that have gone that far.

Origin of the Names of Days

The arrangement of the heavenly bodies according to their distances from the earth, is in the following order:

Saturn, Jupiter, Mars, the Sun, Venus, Mercury, the Moon; and it was a principle of the ancient astrologers that these planets presided in succession over the hours of the day, and from which the Latin designations given to days of the week have been derived; and from these have been formed the modern names used in different countries, either by literal translation, or in the Teutonic tongues, by the substitution, in some cases, of the corresponding deity of northern paganism for the classical god.

SUNDAY—Is so called because it was anciently dedicated to the worship of the sun.

MONDAY—Means literally the Day of the Moon.

TUESDAY—was dedicated to Tuisco, the Mars of our Saxon ancestors, the deity that presided over combats, strife and litigation. Thus, in England, Tuesday is assize day; the day for combat or commencing litigation.

WEDNESDAY—Is so called from Wodin or Odin, a deity or chief among the northern nations of Europe.

THURSDAY—Was named by the Saxons from Thor, the old Teutonic god of thunder.

FRIDAY—Is from Frea, or Friga, a goddess of the old Saxon mythology.

SATURDAY—Means simply Saturn's day, derived from the heavenly body, or deity of that name.

A fool is a man who uses a big word when a little word would express his meaning just as well.

Saving The Small Sums

It is surprising how readily a large amount of money when kept near at hand can disappear.

It is equally surprising how quickly small sums carefully banked can accumulate into a comfortable reserve.

Our Officers invite you to open a Savings Account in this Institution and deposit therein those small sums that are so apt to "slip through the fingers."
